Carpenters Celebrate Anniversary

Quarter Century of the Union's Existence Properly Observed by Banquet, Speaking and Dancing-Gold Watch Chain Presented M. J. Kelley.

Their quarter century anniversary celebrated on Monday evening by Thames union. No. 137, U. B. of C and J. of A., made a notable evening for the Norwich carpenters, their families and friends in T. A. B. hall, where the anniversary programme was conducted from 8 till dancing closed the evening about midnight. The attendance was close to the 150 mark, and a programme with entertaining features for all was well carried out by the committee, which comprised Robert McNeely, chairman, M. J. Kelley, James Grierson, Patrick Barry and William Hopkins.

Oyster Chowder Served.

First on the programme was a banquet, of which the main feature was one of McDougald's No. I oyster chowders. Miller's orchestra was in attendance during the evening playing before and during the banquet hour and for the dancing lafer. Four tables attractively set lengthways of the hall were quickly filled when the invitation and welcome were given by Chairman McNeely and the good things were dispensed by a staff of attentive waitresses who were Miss Mary Gray. Miss Alice McNeely, Mrs. D. Chase, Miss Mary Mack, Miss May Minnehan, Miss Eisle Lapoint, Miss Raidwin, Miss Eisle Lapoint, Miss Katle Barry and Miss Lillian E. Manning. White carnations and red badges were worn by the waitresses.

James Grierson Heard, After the banquet hour. Treasurer James Grierson of Thames union was introduced by the chairman as one who had been with the local carpenters' organization from its infancy, through its childhood, and to the present the pr ent time, giving opportunity for Treas-urer Grierson to respond with brief remarks in which he told something of the record of the union, which now has about 200 members. Its record has been one of honorable and influential been one of honorable and influential dealings in many ways. Its money had been sent to the aid of brother carpenters in all parts of the state and in the country, and more or less through the influence of the Norwich union five others in this part of the state had been formed. Treasurer Grierson bestowed a special word of praise upon the business agent of the union. M. J. Kelley, who he declared was the very best in the state. About ten years ago Thames union played its past in the organization of the state council, then consisting of 17 unions, but now number 66 delegates, representing 30 unions with from four to five thousand members. The state organization was spreading the gospel of the eight-hour movement and assisting towards better conditions. In the 25 years of its existence, Thames union had had two strikes, the first unsuccessful, but the second partially

New London Day:

As is well known to the public in general and to the politicians in particular, the terms of two of the county commissioners of New London county expire with the present legislature—that of R. W. enforce the law. At times his attitudes and gestures were dramatic, reminding some of the older members of the congregation of Dow, and Bentley and Talmadge. He called a spade a spade and black black. His discourse was full of wit, vituperation and scorn, holding his audience spellbound. He carried them with him, and when the envelopes with little pencils were distributed down the aisles for a subscription or a contribution to the work of the league many gave generously on the spot, or sub-scribed a goodly sum to be collected later to carry on the work at Hartford during the present session of the gen or of the congregation, in writing of Rev. Mr. McIntire and his work said that he should be heard here again in the near future and his coming be more generally advertised, so that many now indifferent to the work of the league may become enthusiastic in its support.

The foreigners coming from the old world would bring with them their customs and pernicious practices and establish them here; and it is a good thing that there are such men as the Rev. W. S. McIntire, who has the courage of his convictions, to take up the work that Norwich's immortal Leonard Bacon laid down to serve notice on them: "Thus far shall yo go and no further."

Miss Mary Elizabeth Gleason. There was an unusually large at-tendance of sorrowing relatives and friends for the funeral of Miss Mar Elizabeth Gleason, held at 8.15 o'cloci Monday morning from the residence of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. William J.
